Have you ever wondered if your green thumb and gardening skills could make money for you? Have you wondered if you could turn your love of gardening into a successful part-time or full-time career, and make enough money to pay your bills?

Maybe you lost a job like I did, and are looking for a more satisfying way to make an income from your gardening and marketing skills.

Perhaps you decided to be a stay-at-home parent because you didn't trust childcare options, or the expense was too much, but need a way to help the family budget and wonder if you could sell fresh garden produce, herbs, flowers, or other products you make from those products.

Did you tell yourself, "I can do this," but just were not quite sure where to begin, or "What's the first step?" or "how do I make this work?"

These questions and many others are answered in Backyard Gold How To Begin Selling What You Grow.

Marilyn Batzel Ison is an Agricultural Marketing Strategist, with well over 50-years of experience farming, gardening, and selling farm products, even developing six income streams from her own five-acre farm. She shares the answers to many wanna-be market gardeners and market farmers questions in this one-of-a-kind book.

You will learn the "ropes" to getting started in your own market garden or market farming business right here.
